Hello,

Thank you for your email.

We are sorry you feel we are going in circles; we are trying to assist you with verification to progress your request.

If you would like to confirm a date to attend your chosen O2 store for identity verification, please let us know and we will assist you.

Kind regards,

Ruth

Using the words your group likes to use, you are going in circles.

Worse still, your replies are inconsistent and make little sense. Must I spell out why?

Under UK GDPR, we cannot confirm who any of the individuals in the store were, whether they were staff members, or their roles.

This information is third-party personal data, and we are legally unable to disclose or confirm it as part of a Subject Access Request.

When we refer to a trusted leader, we mean a member of O2 store team who is authorised to carry out identity verification in person.

(end quote)

(quote)

To clarify, we did not disclose any personal data about an individual referred to as a Trusted Leader, nor did we identify who that person is. We explained this only to clarify why we offered in-store verification.

(end quote)

I'm afraid it's not clarifying anything.

And you haven't answered which GDPR article you are referring to.

Why are you disclosing that the Trust Leader in boldface is a member of O2 store team who is authorised to carry out identity verification in person?

Please clarify which GDPR article you are referring to.

Up until now, neither you (the individuals using the email address adminsubjectaccess2@virginmediao2.co.uk) nor any O2 department or representative has been willing to answer a simple question about whether those in the O2 store were staff members of the O2 store.

Besides being evasive, the way you use boldface is also quite cryptic, especially the use on Trusted Leader. What even is this Trusted Leader? Trusted by whom? Could you clarify what this term means and to whom it refers? What does it mean to me?

I am not sure about your definition of an O2 customer. I can only guess the simple answer should be no, as I don't currently have an O2 phone number.

I suggested that I could go to a store to let you verify my identification, but the result would be doubtful if we can't sort out even some simple questions first.

I am glad that at least you responded regarding the redaction of the footage. However, it prompts further questions. You said, "...we can confirm the image of a third party will be disclosed, but they will be blurred with audio muted, so you may not be able to make out what the person looks like or their precise actions." If I am not mistaken, it means you will mask even their actions while also muting the video? Is it really necessary? Is this level of redaction proportional to the amount of personal (versus incident-related) information being redacted?

Preferred Verification

1. In-store verification (agreed arrangement):
   We have coordinated with the store, and a Trusted Leader will be available on the dates/times we sent to you.
   → Please confirm the date and time you will attend so the team can be ready.

Until verification is completed, we are unable to proceed with the request or release any personal information.

Please also confirm:

- Whether you are an O2 customer; and
- If so, we require the full mobile number or account number your request relates to.

In direct response to your question 'Will their actions also be masked?' – we can confirm the image of a third party will be disclosed, but they will be blurred with audio muted, so you may not be able to make out what the person looks like or their precise actions.

If we do not receive confirmation of your attendance for in-store verification, your case will remain on hold. If no verification is received within a reasonable period, your case may be closed.

We are ready to proceed as soon as you confirm your attendance or preferred verification route.

Kind regards,

Tahli

Your Excellencies,

I have reached out to the US and Japan for help in the form of investment in allegiance by sending messages to comments@whitehouse.gov and vice_president@whitehouse.gov, as well as through the official contact portals at https://www.whitehouse.gov/contact/ and https://www.kantei.go.jp/foreign/forms/comment_ssl.html.

In my correspondence, I included details from the following links for reference:
https://github.com/AI-Migrant/mass-madness/blob/main/correspondence/investment-n.md or https://coda.grammarly.com/d/inn_dg4IDZ4crux

The reason I am sending you this email, which is a reply email I am sending to O2, a telecom company in the UK, is to let you know my claims are truly happening and to give you a glimpse of how my access to essential information and the basics of a normal life has been denied for years. I am confident in saying that O2 is with my persecutors, of whom the UK authorities are part.

While this event alone may not constitute persecution, I hope you will see that what I have been documenting is true.

I am aware that my emails to my persecutors are quite different from how people would normally write to another person or organisation. I found it extremely inappropriate to write to or about my persecutors the same way one would normally write to or about another person or organisation, which might appear that they are not the persecutors who have insulted and harmed me for years.

I assure you that I meant to and did offer the best of myself to them before they insulted and harmed me nonstop.

Below you will find my reply to them and the previous exchange. Please try to read between the lines of this exchange for a glimpse of the absurdity at the heart of the years-long persecution—it may not be immediately obvious—and know that this is but an example of a small part of what I have endured, and that my documentary about the persecution is truthful. If the context really is too unclear to third parties, reading my documentary first should provide clarity. I hope, together with the other messages and records, it let you understand how years of my life have been rendered meaningless, and my life as a whole is being destroyed; Thus led me to make my plea to the US and Japan for help in the form of an investment in allegiance, which involves offering me a safe place with fundamental human respect and decency, and I will pledge my allegiance to the people of my new home.

---(reply to O2 starts below)

You are saying that your hope of raising a complaint against yourselves was a response to my first question.

I have contacted and asked to communicate with other people at O2 for my questions. I believe you know you are replying to me with this email address (adminsubjectaccess2@virginmediao2.co.uk) only. Is there not a person at O2 who could answer a simple question without raising a complaint against themselves?

And for my second question?

Lastly, may I presume the passage I quote below is the response to my third question?

“Where CCTV footage includes other identifiable people, we are required to remove their personal data before disclosing the footage to you. The ICO guidance on this states if the footage includes other people, you’ll probably need to redact (e.g. edit or blur) it so they can’t be identified.”

If that’s the case, I am afraid I have to say that you are still not really answering my question. Will their actions also be masked?

I would like to conclude this smoothly, however, I find your responses rather evasive.

Is "If you require any personal data, we will need you to provide the information we have asked you to in our email below so we can proceed with your request. Unfortunately, at this stage, we have been unable to verify you." a response to "You are saying that you need to hide even if those people who acted like the staff of the O2 store inside the O2 store were really staff of the O2 store. And that's according to the UK GDPR. Am I understanding correctly?"?

Could you elaborate what you mean by "fully redact all other individuals"? Do you mean that you will mask their identity, or even their actions?

You are saying that you need to hide even if those people who acted like the staff of the O2 store inside the O2 store were really staff of the O2 store. And that's according to the UK GDPR. Am I understanding correctly?

And there is nobody at O2 who will tell me why I was asked to leave unless you make it a complaint?

I would like to confirm if I will receive the footage covering the entire incident, from my entrance to my departure, including the interaction outside the front door, until I left after picking up my bags outside the store.

But you haven't even answered if every one of them is a staff member of the O2 store.

It would also be nice if you or someone else could answer the second question:
The reason they asked me to leave.

Hello,

I went to an O2 Store on 22 January. A staff member spoke to me near the entrance. He gestured for me to go ahead after I gestured several times to ask if I could see the phones. People, not sure if they were real staff, came one by one to talk to me soon after I started browsing. I gestured that I was just looking at the phones. After a few of them, one gestured for me to leave. I gestured, including writing with my finger on my palm, to ask him why. He responded verbally, and I gestured that I couldn't understand. He took the bags I put down in a corner upstairs. I spent some time gesturing that it's fine for me to leave, but I wanted to know the reason. He still responded only verbally and continued to try to take my other bag away. When I left without getting an answer, I found my bags and some kind of security outside the shop.

I would like to ask for the following:

1. The identity of those people. Was every one of them a staff member of the store?
2. The reason they asked me to leave.
3. The CCTV footage of the whole incident, from my entrance to my departure, including the interaction outside the front door, until I left after picking up my bags outside the store.

Extra information

Location: 229 Tottenham Court Road, London W1T 7QG

Time: around 12.30 p.m. on 22 January.

I had long hair and was wearing a red jacket.

As my belongings, including identifications are taken or stolen by the authorities, I will visit the store if you want to verify that I am the person in the incident.
