Hello,

I went to an O2 Store on 22 January. A staff member spoke to me near the entrance. He gestured for me to go ahead after I gestured several times to ask if I could see the phones. People, not sure if they were real staff, came one by one to talk to me soon after I started browsing. I gestured that I was just looking at the phones. After a few of them, one gestured for me to leave. I gestured, including writing with my finger on my palm, to ask him why. He responded verbally, and I gestured that I couldn't understand. He took the bags I put down in a corner upstairs. I spent some time gesturing that it's fine for me to leave, but I wanted to know the reason. He still responded only verbally and continued to try to take my other bag away. When I left without getting an answer, I found my bags and some kind of security outside the shop.

I would like to ask for the following:

1. The identity of those people. Was every one of them a staff member of the store?
2. The reason they asked me to leave.
3. The CCTV footage of the whole incident, from my entrance to my departure, including the interaction outside the front door, until I left after picking up my bags outside the store.

Extra information

Location: 229 Tottenham Court Road, London W1T 7QG

Time: around 12.30 p.m. on 22 January.

I had long hair and was wearing a red jacket.

As my belongings, including identifications are taken or stolen by the authorities, I will visit the store if you want to verify that I am the person in the incident.
