It seems that I can no longer access the message after having accessed it once with a public computer.

If I remember correctly, you said that you would not open the links I provided in my message to you for security reasons.

I am afraid I have to ask why checking files on GitHub is that much of a security concern.

I will not be able to explain years of persecution in a message or an email effectively. The easiest way to understand what has been happening is to check the record I have written over the years.

To put it simply, I have been treated as non-human by fake asylum processes and abuse of power, and there is a good chance that there are more crimes committed, which I cannot find out since my access to even my own data has been limited. More recently, even my access to public and private services has been limited.

I hope to reach out and get the matter investigated. I think it will be easier for the migration departments of other EU countries than for other countries or organisations to investigate.

I am hoping that the repositories on GitHub will convince you that something is terribly wrong, and it's likely different from what Lithuania and the UK will tell you, or have told you.

I don't expect you to help me with my situation, but I hope that you will at least expose the horrendous crimes committed by my persecutors. It should also be in your and the rest of the EU's interest.
