Hello Pers Camden,

We have an update for you on how your complaint is progressing with us. We've tried to contact you to discuss in more detail, but we were unable to reach you. We didn't want to delay things, so we've gone ahead and offered a proposed resolution.

Here's what you told us

Using the words your group likes to use, you are going in circles.
Worse still, your replies are inconsistent and make little sense. Must I spell out why?

Hello,

Thank you for your email.

A trusted leader is not a role; it's a generalised descriptor we have used when offering to verify you in store.

If you would like to confirm a date to attend your chosen O2 store for identity verification, please let us know and we will assist you.

Kind regards,

Tahli

Under UK GDPR, we cannot confirm who any of the individuals in the store were, whether they were staff members, or their roles.

This information is third-party personal data, and we are legally unable to disclose or confirm it as part of a Subject Access Request.

When we refer to a trusted leader, we mean a member of O2 store team who is authorised to carry out identity verification in person.

To clarify, we did not disclose any personal data about an individual referred to as a Trusted Leader, nor did we identify who that person is. We explained this only to clarify why we offered in-store verification.

(end quote)

I'm afraid it's not clarifying anything.

And you haven't answered which GDPR article you are referring to.

Here's what we found

We attempted to contact you to discuss the details of your complaint and provide you with an update. Unfortunately, we were unable to reach you. We remain committed to resolving your concerns.

Thank you for your email and for taking the time to explain what happened during your visit to our O2 store at 229 Tottenham Court Road on 22 January. We are sorry for the way this experience has made you feel and for any upset caused during and after your visit.

We understand that you are asking for:

- The identity of the people who interacted with you and whether they were O2 staff
- The reason you were asked to leave the store
- CCTV footage covering your visit, including the interaction outside the store

What we can and cannot share

Under UK GDPR, we are not allowed to disclose the identities, roles, or any personal details of other individuals captured in CCTV or involved in the incident. This includes confirming whether specific people were staff members. This information is considered third-party personal data, and we are legally prevented from sharing or confirming it as part of a Subject Access Request.

However, we can:

- Review the incident internally with the store team and management
- Confirm whether the people who interacted with you were members of the O2 store team
- Provide you with any personal data about you that we are able to disclose in line with data protection law, which may include CCTV footage where we can do so without disclosing third-party personal data

We are sorry if our previous explanations have felt unclear or repetitive. Our intention is to follow the law while still giving you as much information about your own data and experience as we can.

To process your request for CCTV footage and any other personal data, we must first verify that you are the person shown in the footage. This is a legal requirement designed to protect your data and prevent disclosure to anyone else.

Here's what we propose

We understand from your email that your belongings, including identification, have been taken or are not currently available. In light of this, we are prepared to offer the following:

We can arrange for you to attend the O2 store at 229 Tottenham Court Road so that a trusted leader (a member of the store team authorised to carry out identity verification) can verify you in person.

During this visit, we will work with you to verify your identity using reasonable alternative methods, taking into account that you may not have standard identification documents available.

Once we have completed verification, we will:

- Continue to process your Subject Access Request for any personal data we hold about you, including CCTV footage where it is possible to provide it in compliance with UK GDPR.
- Review the incident with the store team and provide you with an explanation of our findings, including the general reason you were asked to leave, where we are able to do so without disclosing third-party personal data

We recognise that this situation has been difficult and that you feel our previous responses have not addressed your concerns clearly. We are committed to handling your request properly, within the law, and to giving you a clear outcome.

Just to let you know, we have a dedicated support page which can help you with more information about managing our services, kindly check out <https://www.o2.co.uk/help>. Thank you for your understanding, and we truly appreciate your patience. We look forward to serving you better in the future.
